

John Leer leads global economic research for Morning Consult, a global data intelligence company. In this role, he runs the firm's economic data collection, validation and analysis, working closely with investors, policymakers and corporate executives. His research focuses on the effects of consumer preferences, expectations and experiences on purchasing patterns, prices and employment.