GENERAL MICHAEL HAYDEN
Former Director of the Central Intelligence Agency
Former Director of the National Security Agency

General Michael Hayden is a retired four-star general who served as director of the CIA and the NSA when the course of world events was changing at an accelerating rate. As head of the country’s keystone intelligence-gathering agencies, he was on the frontline of geopolitical strife and the war on terrorism. He understands the dangers, risks, and potential rewards of the political, economic, and security situations facing the planet. Exclusively represented by Leading Authorities speakers bureau. General Hayden dissects political situations in hot spots around the world, analyzing the tumultuous global environment and what it all means for the American people and America’s interests. He speaks on the delicate balance between liberty and security in intelligence work, as well the potential benefits and dangers associated with the cyber domain. As the former head of two multi-billion dollar enterprises, he can also address the challenges of managing complex organizations in times of stress and the need to develop effective internal and external communications.

At the Center of Central Intelligence. General Hayden became director of CIA in May of 2006, capping a career in service to the United States that included nearly 40 years in the Air Force. He served until 2009. From 2005–2006, General Hayden was the country’s first principal deputy director of national intelligence and the highest-ranking military intelligence officer in the country.

From 1999–2005, Hayden had served as the director of the National Security Agency (NSA) and chief of the Central Security Service (CSS) after being appointed by President Bill Clinton. He worked to put a human face on the famously secretive agency, explaining to the American people the role of the NSA and making it more visible on the national scene.

Strategic Command in Dangerous Times. In his nearly 40-year military career, Hayden served as commander of the Air Intelligence Agency and director of the Joint Command and Control Warfare Center. He has also served in senior staff positions at the Pentagon, at the headquarters of the U.S. European Command, at the National Security Council, and the U.S. Embassy in Bulgaria. He also served as deputy chief of staff for the United Nations Command and U.S. Forces in South Korea.

Hayden served as a foreign policy adviser to Mitt Romney’s 2012 presidential campaign and has been a frequent expert and commentator on major news outlets and in top publications, valued for his expertise on intelligence matters like cyber security, government surveillance, geopolitics, and more. He was also featured in the HBO documentary Manhunt, which looked at espionage through the eyes of the insiders who led the secret war against Osama bin Laden.

Hayden is currently a principal at the Chertoff Group and a distinguished visiting professor at the George Mason University School of Public Policy. He was also elected to the board of directors of Motorola Solutions in January 2011 and serves on a variety of other boards and consultancies. In 2013, the Intelligence and National Security Alliance (INSA) awarded Hayden the 29th annual William Oliver Baker Award. In 2014 he was the inaugural Humanitas visiting professor in intelligence studies at Oxford University in the United Kingdom.
Charles Leitner, President

Chuck Leitner is the President of the Berkshire Group, directing the company's investment activity. The former Global Head of RREEF, one of the world’s largest real estate investment managers, Mr. Leitner most recently served as Chairman of the ULI Greenprint Center for Building Performance, a non-profit organization comprised of leading real estate investors focused on reducing greenhouse gas emissions while creating value in property portfolios.

Prior to the Greenprint Center, Mr. Leitner spent 24 years at RREEF, a real estate investment management business and a division of Deutsche Asset Management. During his long tenure at RREEF, Leitner served in a variety of roles, including Global Head of RREEF (CEO) and, most recently, RREEF Chairman. In these capacities, Mr. Leitner led the globalization of the real estate, infrastructure, private equity, and hedge fund businesses of Deutsche Asset Management under the RREEF Alternatives brand. In July, 2010, Mr. Leitner stepped down from his executive responsibilities at RREEF to join the Greenprint Foundation. He also assumed the role of non-executive Chairman of RREEF to provide transitional leadership advice, strategic perspective and investment expertise to the RREEF management team and investment committees and served in that capacity until his departure in March, 2012.

Mr. Leitner graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1981 with a BA in Urban Studies. He currently serves the University of Pennsylvania as a member of the Board of Trustees, as Chairman of the Board of Overseers for Penn’s Division of Recreation and Intercollegiate Athletics, as a member of the Penn Medicine Board of Trustees and its Executive Committee, and as a member of the Board of Overseers for the Penn School of Design.
Mr. Manning is one of the two co-founders of Boston Capital Corporation, which was formed in 1974. From its beginning, the company's goal was to focus on providing equity investment capital for the development of apartment properties throughout the country. Under Mr. Manning's leadership as CEO for the past 40 years, Boston Capital has grown into one of the largest owners/investors in apartment properties in the United States. Through a number of affiliated partnerships, the company has created a portfolio comprised of approximately 2,260 properties with an original development cost in excess of $15.1 billion.

As CEO of Boston Capital, Mr. Manning continues to oversee the company's business development goals. Capitalizing on its core competencies of tax credit investment underwriting, those business development goals include an expansion of investment capital for market rate real estate investment as well as providing mortgage financing for a limited and exclusive number of property acquisitions.

Mr. Manning is a recognized leader in the housing and real estate industries, and has served on the boards of a number of national housing organizations and governmental commissions. In 1997, President Clinton appointed Mr. Manning to the President's Export Council, a board comprised primarily of Fortune 500 CEOs that advised the President on government policies and programs that affect U.S. trade performance. He was also a Presidential appointee to the President's Advisory Committee on the Arts. Mr. Manning serves on the boards of numerous organizations and charities including the Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, the Progressive Business Leaders Network, the American Ireland Fund and the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library Foundation, where he is Chairman of the Distinguished Visitors Program. Mr. Manning is also a member of the Board of Directors of Liberty Mutual Group, the parent company of Liberty Mutual Insurance Company. Mr. Manning also sits on the investment committee of Liberty Mutual Group.

Mr. Manning is a graduate of Boston College.
Andrew Wasynczuk

MBA Class of 1953 Senior Lecturer of Business Administration

Unit: Negotiation, Organizations & Markets

Andy Wasynczuk joined the faculty of Harvard Business School in the spring of 2005. He has taught a wide range of negotiation courses in the required and elective MBA curriculum. He currently teaches the popular elective course on Negotiation as well as Managing, Organizing and Motivating for Value. The latter explores the manager's role in influencing and motivating individuals and teams at an interpersonal level as well as the design and management of the formal systems used to motivate employees (e.g. incentive compensation, promotion, recognition). He is also actively involved in the GMP executive education program.

Wasynczuk came to HBS after sixteen years with the New England Patriots and related enterprises. He originally joined the Kraft family in 1989 as Chief Operating Officer of Foxboro Stadium and helped navigate a progression of moves which led to a championship organization both on and off the field. As Chief Operating Officer for the New England Patriots and Gillette Stadium, Wasynczuk managed the daily business operations of every department in both organizations. In addition to his operating responsibilities, he oversaw the development of various player compensation analysis tools, which continue to be instrumental to the team's ongoing leadership in salary cap management. Wasynczuk's negotiating expertise was evident not only in his player negotiations, but also in many off-field negotiations. He led the negotiations and campaigns necessary to secure the local, state and federal approvals that were required to build Gillette Stadium in Foxboro. He was involved in the negotiations for the Stadium construction contract and oversaw its ultimate Implementation. He was at the center of the naming rights negotiations for the Stadium. During Wasynczuk's last five years with the team, the organization built and opened world class Gillette Stadium and brought three Superbowl Championships to New England.

Prior to joining the Kraft organization, Wasynczuk was a consultant at Bain & Company in Boston. He received his MBA from HBS in 1983. He also holds B.S. and M.S. degrees in Electrical Engineering from Case Western Reserve University. Wasynczuk serves on several charitable boards, including Case Western Reserve University and Massachusetts Salvation Army. Andy and his wife, Rebecca, have four children and live in Westwood, MA.
