Treasury and IRS Issue Proposed Expensing Regulations

The Treasury Department and Internal Revenue Service on August 3 issued proposed regulations to implement 100 percent expensing of business assets. While full expensing does not apply to multifamily structures, it can be beneficial to property placed in units that is depreciated separately from the building or for equipment used to support a multifamily business. For example, the IRS notes that “machinery, equipment, computers, appliances and furniture generally qualify.” Instead of depreciating such eligible property over a number of years, it can now be fully written off in the year of purchase.
